

Scottish Arts Club

New lighting system installed with rewiring carried out throughout building.

The Club is right in the middle of Edinburgh, very near the west end of Princes Street. The elegant Georgian Club House looks over Rutland Square's peaceful garden and provides a sanctuary from banal bars, cacophonous cafes, rowdy restaurants and strident streets. Here, gentle conversations and lively discussions refresh your spirits and and enrich your life. The professional members include painters and sculptors, movie-makers and musicians, planners, playwrights and poets, novelists and journalists, architects and designers, dancers and diplomats. Lay members range from academics, accountants and administrators to dentists and doctors, lawyers and librarians, scientists and students, all with an interest in the Arts.

Works were carried out with minimum disruption to the client with power shut downs organised in conjunction with the routine of the club. New mains distribution system installed with new Distribution boards located through out main house. New emergency lighting and fire alarms system installed.
